

ADDENDUM 9 - Basilisk

The Basilisk or cockatrice, as it's translated in the King James Version of the Bible, is a poisonous lizard or serpent. In mythology, a serpent hatched the cockatrice from a cock's egg and it had the power to kill with its breath or even its glance. This denotes poisoned speech, gossip, and the supercilious look with an arched eyebrow that is meant to harm another. An erect crest on its head and back distinguishes the Basilisk, and this has given it a connection with the crown of a king or queen. Thus the Basilisk has become associated with several reptiles that have crests or hoods that make their heads appear to be bigger than they are. This includes the cobra (or king snake), which is used in some translations.

Cockatrice is translated from the Hebrew word tsepha or tsiphoniy (Strongs 6848) that means a viper, adder, or cockatrice. It is from a root meaning to extrude like the thrusting out of a tongue when hissing.

Basilisk is transliterated from the Greek word basilikos and means kingly, royal, or regal. However, basilisk does not appear in the New Testament in reference to any animal or this metaphor of Satan.

Adder is translated from several Hebrew words. Shephiyphon (Strongs 8207) is the cerastes or horned adder. Pethen (Strongs 6620) is an asp or adder. Tsepha (Strongs 6848), which we just saw above, means a viper, adder, or cockatrice. Finally the akshuwb (Strongs 5919) is an asp or adder.

Asp is translated from the Hebrew word pethen (Strongs 6620), which we just saw is an asp or adder. It is also transliterated from the Greek word aspis (Strongs 785) meaning a serpent and particularly an asp.

Viper is translated from the Hebrew word 'epheh (Strongs 660) and means asp or other venomous serpents like the viper. It is also translated from the Greek word echidna (Strongs 2191), which means an adder or other poisonous snakes like the viper.

There are references to these various poisonous reptiles throughout the scriptures. Their important common characteristic is the poison in their mouth. So here then are the scriptures that refer to the Basilisk: adders, asps, vipers, and the cockatrice.

35 A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things.

Paul Is Bitten by a Viper

Acts 28:2-6

2 And the barbarous people shewed us no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold.

3 And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand. (viper)

4 And when the barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, No doubt this man is a murderer, whom, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live.

5 And he shook off the beast into the fire, and felt no harm.

6 Howbeit they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: but after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and said that he was a god.

None Righteous, No, Not One

Romans 3:10-18

10 As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one:

12 They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

13 Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips: (asp) [Root Sin: gossip. Weapon: deception.]

14 Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness: [Root Sin: gossip]

15 Their feet are swift to shed blood: [Other Sins: murder.]

18 There is no fear of God before their eyes.
